Factsheet: The Slovenian National Assembly (Državni zbor)

1. At a glance

Slovenia is a republic and a parliamentary democracy. The Parliament of Slovenia has a bicameral structure and consists of the National Assembly (Državni zbor) which has 90 Members and the National Council (Državni svet) which has 40 Members. The Slovenian Parliament is considered as an “incomplete bicameral system”, meaning that the upper chamber (National Council) does not have equal competences with the lower chamber (National Assembly) and therefore has less authority.

The National Assembly of the Republic of Slovenia is the supreme representative and legislative institution, exercising legislative and electoral powers as well as control over the Executive. The Members of the National Assembly are directly elected by the citizens. An exception to the principle of universal and equal suffrage is the voting right of the members of the Italian and Hungarian national communities. The right to vote and be elected representative of these communities in the National Assembly is only enjoyed by the members of the communities, and not by all the citizens. Elections to the National Council must take place every four years at the latest, and are based on the principles of proportional representation. The voting age is 18 years.

The current Slovenian coalition government under Prime Minister Dr Miro Cerar (SMC/ALDE) is composed of the Party of Modern Center (SMC/ALDE), the Democratic Party of Pensioners in Slovenia (DeSUS/NI) and the Social Democrats (SD/S&D). The incumbent President, who was directly re-elected in 2017 by the citizens for a five-year term, is Mr Bohut Pahor.
