Amendment 31
Sander Loones

Proposal for a directive

Proposal for a rejection

The European Parliament rejects the Commission proposal.

Or. nl

Justification

The justification given for this proposal is that it will address unfair tax avoidance. The aim is worthy, but can be achieved better by means of other, more proportionate and smarter action. In addition to the harmful effect of the loss of fiscal autonomy inherent in the harmonisation of the corporate tax base, the consolidation and redistribution of taxable profits by the proposed distribution key will disadvantage small, modern economies.

Recital 1

Text proposed by the Commission

(1) Companies which seek to do business across frontiers within the Union encounter serious obstacles and market distortions owing to the existence and interaction of 28 disparate corporate tax systems. Furthermore, tax planning structures have become ever-more sophisticated over time, as they develop across various jurisdictions and effectively take advantage of the technicalities of a tax system or of mismatches between two or more tax systems for the purpose of reducing the tax liability of companies. Although those situations highlight shortcomings that are completely different in nature, they both create obstacles which impede the proper functioning of the internal market. Action to rectify these problems should therefore address both these types of market deficiencies.

Or. fr

Justification

The aim of the Commission's proposal for a directive is to combat aggressive tax optimisation (which de facto, if not de jure, constitutes tax evasion) and not to establish the principle for starting to harmonise Member States' tax systems. The recital should not therefore seek to mix these two objectives, which are entirely independent of one another.

in accordance with the principle that companies pay their fair share of tax in the jurisdiction(s) where their profits are generated. It is therefore necessary to provide for mechanisms that discourage companies from taking advantage of mismatches amongst national tax systems in order to lower their tax liability. It is equally important to also stimulate growth and economic development in the internal market by facilitating cross-border trade and corporate investment. To this end, it is necessary to eliminate both double taxation and double non-taxation risks in the Union through eradicating disparities in the interaction of national corporate tax systems. At the same time, companies need an easily workable tax and legal framework for developing their commercial activity and expanding it across borders in the Union. In that context, remaining cases of discrimination should also be removed.

in accordance with the principle that companies pay their fair share of tax in the jurisdiction(s) where their profits are generated. That principle should also apply to new and innovative business models in the digital era. It should therefore be ensured that companies that generate profits in a Member State in which they do not have a physical establishment but do have a digital presence are treated in the same way as companies having a physical establishment in the country concerned. Accordingly, the concept of ‘digital establishment’ should be defined where there is a significant digital presence, and the Common Consolidated Corporate Tax Base (CCCTB) should also include digital activities. It is necessary to provide for mechanisms that discourage companies from taking advantage of mismatches amongst national tax systems in order to lower their tax liability. resident in the Union and promote the objective of making it a more competitive location for investment internationally. The proposal of 2011 for a CCCTB focussed on the objective of facilitating the expansion of commercial activity for businesses within the Union. In addition to that objective, it should also be taken into account that a CCCTB can be highly effective in improving the functioning of the internal market through countering tax avoidance schemes. In this light, the initiative for a CCCTB should be re-launched in order to address, on an equal footing, both the aspect of business facilitation and the initiative's function in countering tax avoidance. (3c) For unitary taxation to work as a means to end profit-shifting it needs to be global, and that implementing the CCCTB at an EU level runs the risk that current losses from EU members to the rest of world could be locked in, as could the exploitation of the rest of the world by some Member States. An EU-only approach could eliminate the incentives to profit shift within the EU, but exacerbate the incentives and opportunity to profit shift out of the EU. For this reason full-inclusion CFC rules should apply. No income arising from economic activity undertaken by the CFC should be exempted.

(4) Considering the need to act swiftly in order to ensure a proper functioning of the internal market by making it, on the one hand, friendlier to trade and investment and, on the other hand, more resilient to tax avoidance schemes, it is advisable to ensure simultaneous entry into force of the Directive on a Common Corporate Tax Base and this Directive as long as the application of the CCTB is not delayed or conditioned by finalization of the CCCTB. Because this change of regime is a significant step in the completion of the internal market it needs flexibility in order to be properly executed from its start onwards. Hence, as the internal market encompasses all Member States, the CCCTB should be introduced in all Member States. However, if the Council fails to adopt a unanimous decision on the proposal to establish a CCCTB, it is appropriate to initiate, without delay, the procedure for a Council decision authorising enhanced cooperation in the area of the CCCTB. Such enhanced cooperation should be open at any time to any Member State in accordance with the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union. In order to allow adjustment of the CCCTB regime to the constant evolving international and European tax agenda and policies, the European Parliament should produce a yearly assessment and invite, where needed, the European Council to adopt the procedure of article 48 paragraph 7 of the Treaty on European Union. Under this scheme, the European Council would authorise the Council of the European Union to vote at qualified majority on any change needed for CCCTB on the basis of a resolution of the European Parliament.

Whereas (partial) harmonisation of the corporate tax base across the Union could be beneficial to businesses and also help in the fight against tax avoidance by dealing with (hybrid) mismatches between two or more corporate tax regimes, it also has the potential to put more emphasis on competition between Member States based solely on the corporate tax rate, leading to an intensified 'race to the bottom'.

(5c) A severe lack in investments has been one of the root causes of the Union economic troubles but the Union budget is still insufficiently geared towards future-oriented investments. Creating additional Union budget related resources is possible according to the existing flexibilities of the Treaty. This proposal therefore includes the objective to have a part of the EU fiscal revenues financed from the common consolidated corporate tax base.

(6a) Taxing the digital economy at a global level has been a number one priority in the OECD BEPS Action Plan. Therefore, any attempt made to impose a new tax on the digital economy at EU level could put Europe at a mismatch to the rest of the world given that the digital economy is global in nature. As part of the OECD BEPS Action Plan, a report with recommendations on taxing the digital economy at a global level will be published in Spring 2018; any decision to plan for a tax on the digital economy at an EU level in advance of this report would be unnecessary and premature.

(9) In order to prevent circumventing the tax exemption of the gains from the disposals of shares, this tax-free treatment should be disallowed where it is illegitimately extended to sales of assets other than shares. This situation would occur if assets are moved by way of intra-group transactions, without tax implications, to a group member with the plan to subsequently, sell the shares in that group member and include the assets in that sale. In such case, the assets would effectively benefit, under the cover of a sale of shares, from the tax exemption that applies to disposals of shares. Accordingly, it would also be necessary to cater for intra-group transfers of assets which are then sold out of the group within a period of up to two years. Namely, an adjustment should be made in order to treat an asset as having left the group from the Member State where it was located initially, i.e. prior to the intra-group transfer, and in this way, discourage the artificial intra-group transfer of assets (other than shares)

(14a) In order to create a level playing field and to eliminate tax competition conditions having a negative impact on the economic performance of the internal market and leading to a race to the bottom, minimum effective corporate tax rates should be introduced so as to optimise tax efficiency. Such a minimum effective tax rate would furthermore lead to the benefit of better comparing economic performance of Member States across the EU. The average EU top statutory corporate income tax rate is 22.5%, and in some Member States as low as 10%. The declining tendency of this rate should be reversed so as to avoid a race to the bottom. This directive therefore asks the Commission to come up with a legislative proposal for a minimum effective corporate tax rate at 18% in each Member State. Until such a legislation is in place, the Commission should publish statistics of the effective tax rates in Member States, distinguishing between the effective tax rates of SMEs and MNEs.
