Factsheet: The Dutch Senate (Eerste Kamer der Staten-Generaal)

1. At a glance

The Netherlands is the main constituent country of the Kingdom of the Netherlands. Since 1848 it has been governed as a parliamentary democracy and a constitutional monarchy, organised as a unitary state. The Dutch Parliament "Staten-Generaal" is a bicameral body. It consists of two chambers, both of which are elected for four-year terms. The First Chamber, or Eerste Kamer, consists of 75 Members and is elected by the (directly elected) Members of the 12 Provincial Councils and 3 Electoral Colleges from the Caribbean part of the Netherlands.

The Senate's main duties are in the legislative field, but it also plays a role in scrutinizing the actions of the Government. The debate on the Government's budget also gives the Members of the Senate the opportunity to debate current and future policy with the government. Members of the House of Representatives are full-time politicians, whereas Members of the Senate are part-timers who often hold other positions as well. The Senate has a revising role in relation to draft legislation, however it does not have the right of amendment. Formally, the Senate can only reject or accept legislation.

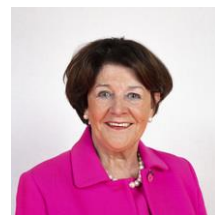

The current Dutch coalition government under the third term of Prime Minister Mark Rutte (VVD/ALDE) since October 2017 is composed of the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy (VVD/ALDE), the Christian Democratic Appeal (CDA/EPP), Democrats 66 (D66/ALDE) and the Christian Union (CU/ECR).
