Concept Note

Introduction

Under the direction of the High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy / Vice-President of the Commission (HR/VP), the EU has been stepping up work on the implementation of the Youth, Peace and Security agenda, as set out in UN Security Council Resolution 2250 (UNSCR 2250).

In September 2017, the EU hosted, together with the UN and civil society partners, a European regional consultation on Youth, Peace and Security in support of the global Progress Study on Youth, Peace and Security mandated by the UN Security Council. In the course of 2017, the EU integrated Youth, Peace and Security into key inter-regional and inter-generational engagements, notably the overarching youth dimension of the 5th AU-EU Summit and the Young Mediterranean Voices Plus initiative.

In the UN context, the UN Security Council Open Debate on Youth, Peace and the UNGA High-level Meeting on Peacebuilding and Sustaining Peace in April 2018 have re-focused global attention on the Youth, Peace and Security agenda and provided impetus for a forward-looking operational strategy for the international community for its implementation.

Against this background, the EU will convene an innovative and inclusive Conference on Youth, Peace and Security in Brussels on 23-24 May 2018, in partnership with the UN and civil society. The EU Conference on Youth, Peace and Security will bring together young peacebuilders from and working with the EU, representatives from EU Institutions, EU Member States, UN entities and other multilateral and non-governmental partners. A level playing field for interactive dialogue will be created to address key external and internal aspects of Youth, Peace and Security from a European perspective.

The EU Conference on Youth, Peace and Security will represent a milestone of the EU's engagement in the agenda, and promote EU-UN cooperation on youth in peacebuilding.

Goals and objectives

The overarching goals of the EU Conference on Youth, Peace and Security are to further reinforce momentum in the EU implementation of the Youth, Peace and Security agenda, foster EU policy on Youth, Peace and Security, promote EU-UN cooperation on youth in peacebuilding, while enhancing the visibility of the Youth, Peace and Security agenda.

The specific objectives of the conference are to (1) provide an innovative platform for EU-level policy dialogue on Youth, Peace and Security through engaging youth from and working with the EU and all other stakeholders in a level playing field (2) lay the foundations of an EU community of practice on Youth, Peace and Security, including EU actors from internal and external policy areas (3) give more concrete definition to further accelerating the EU implementation of the Youth, Peace and Security agenda (4) raise the awareness of political and public audiences, within and outside the EU, about the Youth, Peace and Security agenda (5) create further impetus for EU-UN cooperation on youth in peacebuilding.

Expected outcomes

The European External Action Service (EEAS) will prepare a Chair's summary report, in consultation with all participants, including conclusions and recommendations for stakeholders on further implementing the Youth, Peace and Security agenda.

Decision makers participating in the Conference may consider issuing public statements, jointly or individually, on the further implementation of the Youth, Peace and Security agenda.

Background

The Global Strategy for the European Union's Foreign and Security Policy calls for deepening work on education, culture and youth to foster pluralism, coexistence and respect as a way to nurture societal resilience.

The Council Conclusions on the Integrated Approach to External Conflicts and Crises underline the key role of youth in conflict prevention and peacebuilding.

The European Consensus on Development provides that young people are agents of development and change and, as such, are essential contributors to the 2030 Agenda, including through their ability to innovate. The Consensus also asserts that the EU and its Member States will aim to strengthen the rights of young people and their empowerment in the conduct of public affairs by promoting their participation in local economies, societies and decision-making through youth organisations.

The EU Action Plan on Human Rights and Democracy 2015-2019 calls for peacebuilding initiatives targeting in particular children and youth.

The EU Strategy for Youth 2010-2018 defines the overarching goal of improving access and full participation of young people in society, through increasing youth participation in representative democracy and by supporting youth organisations and encouraging participation of non-organised groups of young people.

The ground-breaking UNSCR 2250 is fully dedicated to the important and positive contributions of youth in efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security, and affirms the important role youth can play in the prevention and resolution of conflicts.

Structure, format, themes

The Conference will take place in Brussels. On 23 May, the programme will be held in the European Parliament, and it will be open to all participants. The closing session on 24 May will be held in the EEAS, and it will be open to youth participants only.

On 23 May, the programme will start with a buffet lunch offered to participants at the meeting venue.

The Conference will begin with an opening session to set the scene.

The Conference will then break down into four parallel interactive thematic panel discussions along the following themes.

- Panel I – Youth inclusion for conflict prevention and sustaining peace

Preventing conflict and addressing its root causes are at the heart of sustaining peace. UNSCR 2250 reaffirms this approach, and promotes the vital role youth can play in conflict prevention and resolution, as a key aspect of inclusive, sustainable and successful peacebuilding.

This panel will focus on how the meaningful inclusion of young people, among them young women and marginalised youth, contributes to conflict prevention and sustaining peace. How to ensure meaningful youth inclusion in peace efforts? Which approaches and actions towards implementing UNSCR 2250 have worked best?

- Panel II – Young people innovating for peace

Peacebuilding is not just about the politics. All over the world, young people engage and mobilise their communities and peers in creative and resourceful ways to promote social cohesion and tolerance. The biggest ever global youth population of 1.8 billion represents a vast potential to innovate for change and development, to realise the 2030 Agenda and other global blueprints.

This panel will look at unconventional and informal peacebuilding approaches and explore how young people harness the power of technology, media, sports and the arts to build peaceful and inclusive societies. What can policy makers learn from the innovations of young people? How can governments and multilateral organisations best connect with, support and scale up youth innovation for peace?

- Panel III – Empowering young people to prevent/counter violent extremism

The overwhelming majority of young people are peaceful. Simplistic approaches overexpose "youth at risk", stereotyping young men as "potential perpetrators" and young women as "potential victims", while neglecting the peaceful majority.

This panel will exhibit groundbreaking youth-led initiatives to prevent/counter violent extremism and how these should inspire future approaches. How can we invest into young people's violence prevention initiatives? How can we reinforce the resilience of youth already exposed to violence, exclusion and marginalisation?

- Panel IV – Protecting the human rights of youth

Protection is one of the five pillars of UNSCR 2250, and research shows that youth feel disproportionately affected by repressive governments, organised crime and gender-based violence.

Against the background of the 70th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, this panel will explore the specific vulnerabilities of children and young people in conflict-affected situations. How do these affect the work of young peacebuilders? How can effective protection mechanisms be put in place to address the unique peace and security needs of children, young women and men? How can we support and protect youth human rights defenders?

As regards the thematic panel discussions, participants will be invited to choose their preferred thematic panel before the event, when they register. As far as possible, preferences expressed by participants will be taken into account, and a list of participants for each thematic panel discussion will be distributed.

The programme on 23 May will include an interactive dialogue with Mr. Stavros Lambrinidis, EU Special Representative for Human Rights and youth participants, and it will end with concluding remarks.

On 24 May, a closing session with the HR/VP and youth participants will take place.

The conference language will be English, with full interpretation to and from French in the plenary sessions and partial interpretation in the thematic panel discussions.

Participants

Youth participants will be individuals already involved in or associated with existing EU youth networks, created and/or supported by the EEAS, the European Commission and the European Parliament, including networks implemented by partners. Gender balance, geographical balance and overall diversity will be ensured.

Decision makers, policy experts and practitioners will be invited from the EU institutions, EU Member States, the UN system and other multilateral partner organisations, civil society and other stakeholders.
