

Factsheet: The Slovak National Council

1. At a glance

Slovakia is a parliamentary democracy. The Slovak Parliament (National Council of the Slovak Republic or Národná rada Slovenskej republiky) is a unicameral body composed of 150 Members, elected by universal suffrage under proportional representation. Members are elected directly to four year term from one nationwide constituency. Only a citizen who has the right to vote, has reached 21 years of age and has permanent residency in the Slovak Republic is eligible to be elected.

The National Council approves domestic legislation, constitutional laws and the state budget, and monitors the government activities. Its consent is required to ratify international treaties, and is responsible for approving military operations. It also elects individuals to some positions in the executive and judiciary as provided by law. The Speaker of the National Council ranks second in the hierarchy of State, after the Head of State, and represents the Council at national and international level.

Following the last Parliamentary elections of 29 February 2020, the ruling left wing coalition comprising Social Democracy, the Slovak National Party and Most–Híd, which was led by Prime Minister Peter Pellegrini of Smer – SD, was defeated. The center-right Ordinary People party lead by Igor Matovič emerged victorious, with voters responding to the party's pledge to push anti-corruption reform. The discourse during these elections was dominated by the 2018 double murder of journalist Jan Kuciak and his fiancée, Martina Kusnirova. Kuciak had reported on high-level corruption within the government. The murder led to nationwide street protests, forcing Fico to resign. However, the Smer coalition remained in power, under the leadership of Peter Pellegrini.

On March 20, the "We Are Family" (Sme Rodina) party leader, Boris Kollár, has become the new Speaker of the Slovakian Parliament. Kollár, needing at least 76 votes, was elected in a secret ballot by 106 MPs. He has become the second most senior constitutional official, replacing Andrej Danko (Slovak National Party/SNS) in the post. The meeting was held under strict security and preventive measures due to the spread of COVID-19.

The new government, led by Igor Matovič (OĽaNO), has been appointed by the head of state on Saturday, March 21, 2020. The new government is formed by OĽaNO, "We are Family", SaS and "For People". The four-leaf clover shared positions in the government so that OĽaNO occupied eight posts, "We are family" and SaS three, "For people" two.

The new coalition government will hold 95 seats in the 150-member National Council, giving it the power to change the constitution.
